

Presentation of the OECD Review of Labour Migration Policy in Korea: Perspectives on the future in light of international experience

Recruiting Immigrant Workers
KOREA

OECD

Date: January 28, 2019

Time: 13:30~16:00

Venue: Conference Hall B (B2), Korea Chamber of Commerce and Industry

Korea is in a crucial moment in its position in global labour migration flows. It has one of the largest temporary foreign worker programmes of any OECD country. Over the past decade, the share of foreigners in total employment has increased more than in many OECD countries. Foreign workers play a key role in some industries. But Korea's labour migration system is more than just temporary foreign workers: Korea is competing with other countries to attract the best and brightest global talent, to internationalise its higher education institutions, to position itself for foreign entrepreneurs launching start-ups.

The OECD has conducted a Review of Korea's labour migration policy. This review looks closely at how Korea's policy has been designed to respond both to the unique situation of Korea and to the broader global challenges affecting economic migration policy. This seminar will present the main findings of the OECD Review and discuss some of the most important challenges facing the future of labour migration management in Korea.

Time	Chair	Session	Speaker
13:30~13:50		Welcome remarks	Director, Korea Labor Institute (KLI) Jean Christophe Dumont, OECD
13:50~14:20		Main findings of the OECD Review of Labour Migration Policy in Korea	Jonathan Chaloff, OECD
14:20~14:40	Jean Christophe Dumont, OECD	Foreign Worker Policies in Korea: Issues and policy challenges	Kyu-Yong Lee, KLI
14:40~14:55		Discussion	Yeon Bog Lee, HRD Korea
14:55~15:10		Discussion	Seori Choi, MRTC
15:10~16:00		Q&A	